

ABSTRACT

A power control circuit is used to control the power supplied to a circuit from a power source. The power control circuit is operable to connect and disconnect the power source from the circuit. The power control circuit connects the power source to 5 the circuit in response to an externally applied magnetic field.